FOUNDER'S FOREWORD

Health tech is changing lives.

Every day, we see breakthroughs in AI, digital health, and biotech we once thought were impossible. The future of healthcare is being built right now by people like you.

And let's face it: this work is tough. Building solutions that matter takes guts, focus, and persistence. Tech founders know what it means to push boundaries and keep going, even when it's hard.

We were proud to host this year's event in Barcelona. Barcelona is also a magnet for investors, drawing in capital and international attention. This mix of talent and opportunities makes it the perfect place to scale new solutions and drive growth.

Thank you to all the startups, pharma companies, healthcare providers, tech companies, insurers, and investors who joined us. Your innovations, partnerships, and investments are driving change across industries, shaping the future of healthcare. Your support is crucial in turning groundbreaking ideas into solutions that will improve lives and transform the healthcare landscape. Together, we are making a real difference.

To everyone who was a part of Health Tech Forward this year, whether you were pitching your ideas, sharing expertise on stage, or soaking in the energy of the crowd – thank you for making this event unforgettable. Your passion and commitment are what makes this community so special.

I hope to see you again next year!

EVENT HIGHLIGHTS

“UNDERSTANDING YOUR BODY SHOULDN'T REQUIRE A MEDICAL DEGREE”

E DELIVERY
ELEHEALTH

According to Valentina Milanova, Founder and CEO of Daye, healthcare desperately needs a user-friendly revamp – and patients shouldn't have to decode medical jargon.

Tomas Lapinskas, Director for Public Health, Research and Education at The Hospital of Lithuanian University of Health Sciences, agrees:

“The solutions we make need to be suitable for older generations as well as for younger ones.

They need to be simple”

IN OUR "PATIENT FIRST" ERA: SHARED DECISIONS, TRUST AND TAILORED CARE SOLUTIONS

REAL TALK ABOUT PATIENT-CENTRED CARE

At this panel, the speakers cut through the buzzwords and tackled the challenges of making care truly patient-focused.

“The hard part isn’t thinking – it’s listening to patients and acting on what they say,” shared Justin Coffey, Chief Medical Officer at Workit Health.

Marta Garcia Manrique, R&D Chief Patient Officer at Servier, added: “Solutions are often rolled out in Europe or the US, but the thing is: patients vary across countries.”

OVERCOMING INNOVATION CAPACITY CHALLENGES

Three biggest roadblocks in healthcare? Tech, red tape, and money, according to Yara Alenazi, a health tech investor at MassMutual Ventures. She and other panellists discussed what needs to change for the industry to grow.

Andrew Miles, Chief Business Officer at Our Future Health UK, emphasised the need for a shift in mindset: “Our risk appetite needs to change quickly”. He also pointed out that regulations will always lag behind innovation, so addressing this gap is essential for successful scaling.

SCALING AI IN HEALTHCARE: A REALITY CHECK

Healthcare investments are skyrocketing, outpacing other tech sectors. And yet, the industry isn't ready to fully embrace new tech solutions, including AI. Why? Because disrupting the usual workflow is a hard pill to swallow. The challenge for future founders is to prove the value – cost savings, time efficiency, better outcomes – and show how transformative these tools can be.

Annie Thériault, Managing Partner at Cross-Border Impact Ventures, says:

“Today it’s pretty rare to see something that wasn’t developed with AI. And if you’re not using the tools, you’re missing out.”

AI's influence is growing, particularly in decision support for clinical practice. The big question? Who should the interface serve – patients, nurses, or doctors?

It's a decision that will shape the impact.

NEW ERA FOR WOMEN'S HEALTHCARE

Women's health is finally getting the spotlight it deserves. Investments and innovations are breaking down stigmas and inequalities, pushing the field into a transformative phase.

Once under-researched, it's now brimming with advancements in areas like early disease prevention during pregnancy and hormone tracking. Yet, some still see women's health as niche. Rubén Molina, CEO of INNITIUS, challenges this view:

“Women's health isn't narrow – half the world's population are women. It's not just about pregnancy; so many factors impact women's health.”

While progress is evident, panellists emphasise that diversity in leadership, education, and awareness are critical to real change. As Emily Napier, New Business Development Leader Europe – MCC & Women's Health at Philips, points out:

“Partnerships are crucial. You can't do it alone. Even big companies need expertise and collaboration to succeed.”

HEALTH TECH CHALLENGERS

The spotlight of the Health Tech Forward event was the Health Tech Challengers finals, during which startups pitched their solutions to a jury panel of industry professionals. Each of them advocated for one of 8 tracks:

- Connected Care
- AI Supported Healthcare
- TechBio
- Disruptive Diagnostics
- Chronic Disease Management
- Cancer Prevention and Care
- Women's Health
- Solving X (Wild Card)

2024 WINNERS

Noah Labs creates AI-powered software solutions for medical care and research, helping to improve diagnosis, manage conditions, and guide interventions for better patient outcomes.

Innotive Diagnostics changes how urinary tract infections are diagnosed and treated, preventing misprescribed antibiotics and countering antimicrobial resistance.

Pharmacelera offers proprietary Computer-Aided Drug Design software, available through flexible licensing and computational chemistry tools.

Nui develops a game-changing app for family caregivers, offering comprehensive support in everyday care.

2024 WINNERS

The Blue Box builds a urine-based breast cancer test with a sensitivity of 88.42%, outperforming mammography by 15%-30%.

Using human-centered design, Amparo redefines prosthetic socket technology to revolutionise healthcare systems and empower amputees.

Oxford Cancer Analytics transforms curative cancer treatments through a minimally invasive blood test and machine learning.

MediTuner is a Medtech company that has developed AsthmaTuner, a complete solution that patients can use to comply with best practices remotely.

ONE ULTIMATE WINNER

After an exciting final round of pitches and voting, Oxford Cancer Analytics was crowned the ultimate winner of Health Tech Challengers 2024. Their approach to cancer prevention impressed the jury and the audience – not just for the innovative solution but for the passion and purpose driving their work.
